Course Descriptions

ECO 110 Introduction to Economics (3)

The course is designed to introduce students to both microeconomic and macroeconomic topics. Students will be introduced to ideas regarding incentives, constraints, opportunity costs, and the unintended consequences of good intentions. The course will also cover basic concepts such as rationality, the price mechanism, specialization and exchange, and Christian stewardship. On completing the course, students will be equipped with the basic mathematical skills necessary for understanding economic theory.

ENG 110 College Writing I (3)

Students will develop competency in the art of writing, with an emphasis on the personal essay. This course includes: a brief review of grammar and usage, frequent practice in writing compositions and analysis of selected essays as models for writing.

ENG 120 College Writing II (3)

Prerequisite: ENG 110 College Writing I

An emphasis on academic writing in order for students to develop competency in the areas of research and analysis. Particular emphasis is placed upon the collection of information through varying sources, the citation of that information and student response to such information in the appropriate academic format.

HIS 212 Western Civilization II (3)

Students will examine the development of civilization with considerable attention to the contributions of the Renaissance, the Reformation, the Enlightenment, and the Scientific Revolution to the development of the modern world. After becoming familiar with the great events and personalities that have shaped the west, students will identify major philosophical trends that have created the modern world.

MAT 155 Quantitative Reasoning (3)

This is an introductory course in arithmetical, geometric and algebraic analysis that introduces students to the place of mathematics in the quest for truth in the conversation of Western civilization. It is designed to equip students to understand basic issues in economics, financial management, business, science, and public policy in a way that sensitizes them to the use and abuse of mathematical reasoning in the public square. Beginning with standard arithmetical, geometric and algebraic concepts and manipulations, quantitative analytical skills will be extended to more complex quantitative analysis focused on applications of linear, quadratic, exponential and logarithmic functions, as well as systems of linear equations, infinite sequences and series, basic combinatorial analysis, and elementary probability theory. Prerequisite: No prerequisite, though passing high school grades in algebra I and geometry or their equivalents would be very helpful. Students who take MAT 155 for credit may not take MAT 160 for credit.

MAT 160 Pre-Calculus (3)

Prerequisite: SAT-M score of 500 or equivalent

This course will introduce and develop competence with a variety of mathematical concepts and techniques useful in the natural sciences, economics, finance, and public policy analysis. Beginning with a review of basic coordinate geometry, facility in algebraic and graphical analysis will be extended to linear, quadratic, polynomial, rational, exponential, logarithmic, and trigonometric functions. The latter part of the course will develop and apply a variety of mathematical tools: systems of linear equations and their solutions using basic matrix algebra; permutations, combinations, and basic probability theory; infinite sequences and series; mathematical induction; the binomial theorem. If time permits, some special topics may be considered at the end of the semester: polar coordinates, the complex plane, vectors, conics, etc. Emphasis throughout the course will be placed on real world applications.

POL 210 Foundations of Politics (3)

This course explores fundamental questions about the nature of politics in all countries and in every age. It addresses questions about liberty and tyranny, the individual and the community, religion and politics, and does so through a selection of great political literature, speeches and documents. We ask: What is the best way of life, the best form of government, the purpose of government, the range of political activity, the sources of disorder, the responsibilities of citizens, the obligations of Christians, and the place of religion, morality, and philosophical reflection in political life? As guides in this enterprise, we will study the writings of some of the, poets, historians, theologians, and political theorists.

REL 211 Introduction to New Testament Literature (3)

An introduction to the distinctive genres of New Testament literature, coupled with hermeneutical principles and methodology for each. Emphasis is given to the development of motivation and aptitude for study and interpretation of the New Testament, as well as application to life. Course assignments will center on acquisition of practical skills useful for independent study of the New Testament.

New Student- a degree seeking student who has applied and been admitted to the college in an approved degree program.

Continuing Student- a degree-seeking student who was enrolled last semester in an approved degree program.

Non-Degree seeking Student- non-matriculated student not enrolled in a degree program. Non-degree seeking students may earn a maximum of twelve (12) credits through King’s Online. Students wishing to complete more credits are invited to apply to College as matriculated students.

*On-campus matriculated students enrolled at King’s New York City campus may take King’s Online courses only during Summer Term.

** Each student must see his/her advisor prior to registration. If you do not see an advisor, you will not be allowed to register online. Freshman and sophomores are to be advised by the Office of the Registrar. Junior and senior are to be advised by faculty advisor in their chosen disciplines. You may view your advisor via the Student Portal.

All new and continuing degree seeking online students should contact the Office of the Registrar to schedule a phone advisement session.

ACADEMIC INFORMATION – SUMMER 2012

HOLDS

If you owe a past-due balance to the College, have an overdue library book, or are missing any information from your Academic or health file, you will not be allowed to register online. You may view your holds on your Student Portal.

PREREQUISITES

You will not be allowed to register for any courses for which you have not fulfilled the necessary pre-requisites.

PROGRAM MAPS

It is important that you remain on the program map for your chosen discipline. Your degree audit, which is accessible via the student portal, will help you in choosing your class schedule. If you have not declared a major or do not have a degree audit assigned to your account, follow the links below to access the program maps for the various disciplines at King's.

ADDING OR DROPPING A COURSE

A student may drop a course without any notation appearing on the student's transcript until June 6th. After June 6th, a student can leave a course only by withdrawing. See the next section for details. To add or drop a course, a student must complete an Add/Drop Form (available on the Student Portal). A student must consult their advisor before submitting this form.

WITHDRAWING FROM A COURSE

After the official add/drop period, students may withdraw from a course. Students who withdraw after June 6th will receive a W on their transcript; students who withdraw after June 25th will receive either a WP (withdrawn passing) or a WF (withdrawn failing) based on the grade earned to that point.
